Selection Guidelines When Shopping for Portable Appliances

Choose a good brand name appliance sold by a reputable dealer. Make certain service facilities and replacement parts are readily available.

Always look for the Underwriters' Laboratories seal, which indicates appliance has been tested and meets electrical safety standards.

Check wattage and other electrical information, which is usually stamped on the underside of an appliance. Appliance "Spec" sheets give additional power data.

Make sure appliance parts fit together easily and there are no protuding screws or rough metal edges, which indicate poor workmanship.

Control markings should be durable, easy-to-read.

Look for an appliance with a stable base, to avoid tipping, and well-insulated legs or table rest for countertop protection.

Be sure signal lights are visible, even from a distance of several feet away.

Cleanability is c ucial. Interior and exterior surfaces should be smooth and with few seams and crevices. Wide openings are important.

Ask about heat-resistant knobs or controls so appliance can be handled safely when in operation.

Hand-held "portables" should fit your hand comfortably and be light-weight for carrying.

Try out detachable handles, lids, temperature controls to see if they're easy to remove and reinsert.

If appliance is to be used for liquids, does it fill easily and pour well?

Handles on large appliances should be strong enough to support total weight of unit when filled with food.

Lt. Colan, right, a career army officer has been in Appomattox at old Giles farm on Oliver Road. With Ron are son Ronnie, front row left, daughter, Estella, and son, Pete, and wife, Sophia.

CAREER OFFICER

Colle Talk In Viet Bunker Brings Major To Appomattox County

conversation during Days in Viet Nam has increase of population ppomattox county.

Lt. Joe Colan, wife and children, Estella, Ronnie, Pete, settled on S. B. Giles farm on Giles Road. The house was built in 1895 by Giles and has been in the Giles family for almost before the Colans moved to two years ago.

explained how a career officer happened to settle Appomattox County as a boy I was getting to the and I wanted somewhere Ronnie and I remembered those hours of bunker that transpired between and Bill Slagle during Nights in Viet Nam.

used to spend hours during the virtures of Amherst County and its Well, Billy got out of army all went to West and almost forgot about them.

continued, "I went to Lisbon for school and was there I called Bill, was living in Madison Heights, and he invited me down and see him.

to sooner gotten out of that we were on our Appomattox. Billy's dad came around the area while I didn't find him. I liked right then, Bill and I kept looking around for me and when I was there I knew I had found home.

farm had no water, no facilities and was in need of minor repairs and updating when the Colans moved in. They have installed a well and renovated a good deal of the house to date and most of the credit for their work is due to the neighbors.

"I could never have been successful doing without the help and good friends and neighbors," Ron says, "In the past they carried jugs of water to us, they loaned us tools, offered advice on what and how to do things and even brought us food items, vegetables and fruits and the like.

"People like Harold Mann, Sonny Conner and Charles Torrence have helped to prove everything Billy said about the county and its people. They have all been simply fantastic and we can never show our appreciation for what they have done."

Ron pays further credit to the citizens of Appomattox County when he says, "If we had had 30 lieutenants from Appomattox County, we would have won the war in Viet Nam. Billy Slagle was one of the best young officers I have ever worked with."

The Colans have many visitors from all parts of the United States as army friends drop in to pay their respects and spend a day or two.

"We took the old kitchen, which is detached from the main house, and turned it into guest housing," Sophia says, "Sometimes I feel more like we have a hotel than a home. But I love it. The country here is very much like my native Germany."

Ron says, "There is a real challenge here. I have to learn to organize this 80 acres, where to put pasture land, whee to put trees, where to groom cattle and all the other little tricks that goes with farming. We just have to improvise until we get things the way we want them."

Slagle, now the Town Manager of Appomattox, and Ron met when Major Colan was the operations officer for the Army's First Engineer Battalion and Slagle was an engineering officer in the same battalion.

Slagle says, "I am real proud of Appomattox County and the people who live here, and although I had no idea Ron would ever settle here, I am glad that he chose Appomattox for a home. It proves that I have a right to be proud of this region."

Colan, a native of Arlington attended Virginia Military Institute prior to joining the army 12 years ago. The Major recently completed the army's General Staff College at Fort Leveanworth, Kan. and is looking forward to the day he can retire and spend full time on his farm.

"It will be a real learning experience," Ron concludes.

"I CAME NOT TO SEND PEACE, BUT A SWORD."
MATT. 10:34

Christian will be sure to make enemies. It will be one of objects to make none; but if to do the right, and to believe Him, should cause him to lose every earthly friend, he will have but a small loss, since his great Friend in heaven will be more friendly, and reveal Himself to him more graciously than ever. Oh you who have taken up His cross, know you not that your Master said? "I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." Christ is the Peacemaker; but before peace, He brings war. Where the darkness must retire. Where truth is, the lie is not at rest, if it abides, there must be a stern conflict, for the lie cannot rest and will not lower its standard, and the lie must be trodden under foot.

If you follow Christ, you shall have all the dogs of the world barking at your heels. If you would live so as to stand the test of the last tribunal, depend upon it the world will not speak well of you. He who has the friendship to the Most High, men will have to win by unflinching fidelity, since it is a testimony against their iniquities. Fearless of all consequences, you must do the right. You will need the courage of a lion unhestitatingly to pursue a course which shall turn your best friend into your bitterest foe; but for the love of Jesus you must thus be valiant. For the truth's sake to hazare reputation and even life is such a deed that to do it constantly you will need a firm set of moral principle which only the Spirit of God can work in you. Turn not your back like a coward, but play the man. Fight manfully in your Master's steps, for He has ordained this rough way before you. Better a brief warfare and eternal rest, than false peace and everlasting torment.
